LAWSON CONGRATULATES LOCAL STUDENT ON WELLS SCHOLARSHIP

INDIANAPOLIS—State Rep. Linda Lawson (D-Hammond) offered her congratulations to David Pavkovich, a Munster resident who recently received Indiana University's (I.U.) Wells Scholarship.

Wells Scholars receive full tuition and course-related fees in addition to a living stipend for four years of undergraduate study on I.U.'s Bloomington campus.

"David's hard work is a great example to other students that long hours of study and a commitment to one's community can have rewards," said Lawson. "I wish David great success in his academic pursuits. Without a doubt, he will have a positive impact in whatever field he ultimately chooses to pursue."

I.U. created the Wells Scholars Program to honor former I.U. Chancellor Herman B. Wells. Since the program's inception in 1990, more than 300 students have become Wells Scholars.

Nineteen incoming freshmen and one senior from Indianapolis were named scholars this year. Fourteen of the freshmen scholars are Indiana residents. The other five are from Georgia, Illinois, Massachusetts, Tennessee, and Texas.

The Wells Scholarship selection is based on activities inside and outside of the classroom.
